Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Sunday 05 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Unsettled and rather cold weather continues.

This Evening and Tonight:
Drier in most parts for a time, with some clear spells and patchy frost. However thickening cloud and rain reaching Northern Ireland around midnight and many northern and western areas later. Some hill snow in the north. Turning windy again.

Monday:
Rain continuing eastwards, some snow chiefly on hills in the north and east. Clearer conditions with blustery showers following, showers perhaps heavy with hail, thunder and hill snow.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Unsettled and showery throughout. Very windy with gales, or severe gales on Tuesday with longer spells of rain, turning to snow over high ground in the north.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.